Intentionally Developing Relationships With Others

I was going through my emails the other day as I get quite a few. As I write this article, I already have received 27 emails before noon. As I went through them, I came across this article. It was written for men in ministry. I sent it out to the men that I know so they could be challenged the same way I was. As I thought about the article, I realized this is NOT just an article for men, but an article for ANY believer. It reminds us that it is good to have relationships with non-believers, so we can share God's Good News with them. But it ALSO reminds us that we NEED to have other more mature believers in our life that encourage us and help build us up, so we don't walk down a road that may lead us astray. Instead, we need to seek relationships with healthy mature believers that encourage us, AND perhaps even be the healthy mature believer who encourages others. I hope you enjoy the article. And just so you know, this article came from the website www.pastors.com, no author was given.

"Do not be misled: 'Bad company corrupts good character.'" 1 Corinthians 15:33 (NIV)

God wants you to have non-believers as friends. He wants you to love everyone, show kindness to everyone, and help everyone you can. If you don't have any non-Christian friends, you won't be around anyone you can share the Good News with. And if you want your church to have a passion for evangelism, you need to model that in your own life.

But don't miss this—your best friends should be Christians. They should be strong believers. It's always easier to pull people down than to pull them up. That's why you must make sure the people you hang out with the most are moving you in the right direction. They should be building you up rather than tearing you down.

Where do you want to be in 10 years?
What kind of person do you want to be?

The truth is, the people you spend your time with and the books you're reading reveal where you'll likely end up in the future. As the Bible warns us, "bad company corrupts good character" (1 Corinthians 15:33 NIV).

Your friends are too important to pick by chance. You must be intentional. That's why everyone, even pastors, should be in a small group with fellow believers. Do whatever it takes to build and nurture those relationships.

While this article is specifically pointing toward being in a small group, and I agree with that, you do not need to be in a small group to develop a trusting and accountable relationship with another mature believer. Just go out to coffee with them. Go to breakfast or lunch together. Play golf together - I do that. Have a BBQ at your house and invite them over. Do whatever you can to develop that relationship, and be sure to tell them right away why you want to get to know them better. It should really encourage us when someone asks us to encourage them and even disciple them. Ask God to show you who you should approach to do that with, and create an opportunity for that to happen.

Prayer Corner

The title is "Showers of Blessing" by Daniel Whitter
 There shall be showers of blessing, this is the promise of love
 There shall be seasons refreshing, sent from the Savior above
 There shall be showers of blessing, precious reviving, again, over the hills and the valleys sound of abundance of rain
 There shall be showers of blessing, send them upon us O LORD
 Grant to us now a refreshing, come and now honor your WORD.
